People from all walks of life congregated at the corner of Brock and Queen Streets to protest the corporate tax cuts coming in the next budget. The Labour Congress, 2251 USWA, Cupe and MP Tony Martin spoke to people and handed out leaflets with information on the upcoming cuts. Tony Martin seems to be at all functions that determines the well being or lack of for the average people. Councillor Joe Kromptich was there representing 2251.

Felicia Fahey, the organizer of the rally and a member of OPSEU and "All Together Now! A Champion for Change", has been working on this campaign against these tax cuts for months. She says that the days of "The rich get richer and the poor get poorer have to stop and people have to speak out. McGuinty's corporate tax cuts will cost

Ontario $2.4 Billion.

The tax cuts are heading to corporations like the big six banks who made in excess of $14 Billion and paid out more than $8 in bonuses, last year.
